Malleable Devices Inc Launches the SynCh Universal Sync Charger—
"The Smartest Charger in the World"

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., December 2, 2005—Malleable Devices Inc ("MDI") today announced the launch of its breakthrough power and data Car/Wall/USB multi-charger, the SynCh™ Universal Sync Charger. The patent pending SynCh uses interchangeable mTips™ to provide both power and data compatibility with thousands of different mobile devices, including cellphones, iPods, Treos, BlackBerrys, wireless headsets, digital cameras, flash drives and more.

In contrast to adapters made by iGo, Belkin and Targus which supply power only, the SynCh is also a universal USB 2.0 data system. This unique functionality enables consumers to transfer music, pictures, video and other media, including iTunes, digital photos and streaming video, between their PC or Mac and their data devices.

"We are pleased to offer consumers a compact and ultra lightweight means to address all of their portable electronics' charging and data transfer needs," said David Cuthbert, President of MDI. "While other products offer limited functionality, we recognize that consumers have both power and data requirements, particularly with today's data-rich devices such as MP3 players, digital cameras and smartphones. For about the same price as a basic charger, the SynCh delivers a complete power and data solution for the mobile user."

The SynCh can also simultaneously charge two devices from a single car socket, wall outlet or USB port. Examples include: a Treo or BlackBerry plus a wireless Bluetooth headset; a cellphone plus an iPod; a Sony PSP plus a digital camera; or even two different brands of cellphones.

"I travel constantly, and I'm always looking for ways to cut down on the weight of my gear," said technology consultant Michael Sommer, who appears regularly on TV as the Gadget Guy. "I've tried all the other charging solutions on the market, including products from iGo, Radio Shack, Targus and Kensington. The SynCh beats them all."
